Purpose: Gators Humans vs. Zombies (GHvZ) promotes safe social and recreational activities for UF students around campus. It brings back a memorable childhood experience of tag, shooting nerf blasters, and playing outside with friends and it is a stress-relieving and fun activity to enjoy among the busy college semester. We also use this organization as a way to connect all kinds of different students. Team building and cooperation is naturally integrated into the game, which allows a unique community to be formed by people of all different majors and ages based on their participation in the sport of Humans vs. Zombies. Students, especially new students, forge friendships through this game that last throughout their college years and beyond. What can create a stronger bond than running from Zombies and surviving the apocalypse together?

Activities: Gators Humans vs. Zombies aims to create a thoroughly planned and immersive experience for players, which includes creating a full-blown story centering on zombies, as well as planning multiple “missions” per day with activities and objectives for players to complete. Planning the game not only takes a lot of time, but it requires the creation and purchase of props, materials for missions, fliers and banners for advertising, and also providing food for our main events. The creative team works for months in advance to create an amazing experience for players and one of the best games around. So much hard work and passion is put into the planning of each game, and the necessary funds will help to continue to create these one-of-a-kind experiences.

There are week-long games each semester, as well as several mini missions (short, 1-day games) throughout the year. These events allow students to get together, get outside, explore the campus, and have fun.
